result of the decreasing of the brightness of the partial region until the partial region is no longer displayed.

18. The method of claim 15, further comprising adjusting the brightness of the partial region, including increasing the brightness of the partial region in response to a difference between the current viewpoint brightness information and the peripheral brightness information not meeting a second emphasis threshold.

19. The method of claim 18, wherein the controlling of the displaying of the current image further includes controlling a displaying of a sequence of frames while maintaining a result of the increasing of the brightness of the partial region until the partial region is no longer displayed.

20. The method of claim 15, further comprising adjusting the brightness of the partial region, where the partial region is the peripheral region.

* * * * *